Ted Rogers Student Profile

My favourite part about working in the Canadian Business Tax service line at Deloitte, during my Co-op work terms, was definitely the people in the group and the complexity of the clients' businesses. From day one, I was made to feel very welcome by everyone in the group and throughout my work terms, I developed great relationships with tons of my colleagues! Also, the clients I worked with ranged from various industries. So, I was able to get plenty of exposure to tax work that was different.

I had a different recruitment process than most other hires. I was actually hired after a coffee chat I had with a Tax Manager that I met during one of Deloitte's in-house events! That Tax Manager ended up being my Coach at Deloitte and is directly responsible for overseeing my growth as a future CPA in the Canadian Business Tax service line. I like telling my recruiting story because there are plenty of ways to become part of the Deloitte team outside of the traditional interview process. So, get networking!

I would say the best way to succeed at Deloitte is to work hard, be a sponge, and be that person others want to work with. If you work hard, your effort will be seen and your more senior co-workers will assist you when you need it because they know you are genuinely trying. By being a sponge, you are taking in new information (take notes!) and hopefully are able to ask more meaningful questions. By being someone who people would want to work with, you help make the workflow smoother and co-workers' days better. Finding common interests allows you to have more personal interactions than just conversations about work.
